Serving the literary community since 1973*

— Carlos Reyes is a Portland poet, translator, and world traveler. He has been a frequent visitor to Ireland since 1972, and this spring gave readings at the Eamon de Valera and Patrick J. Hilery libraries in County Clare, Ireland, and The Over the Edge Series in the Galway City Library. His first prose book, The Keys to the Cottage: Stories from the West of Ireland (2015), reflects his long interest in Ireland. His recent books of include Pomegranate, Sister of the Heart (2013); The Book of Shadows: New and Selected Poems (2009), and A Suitcase Full of Crows (1995), winner of the Bluestem Prize. His most recent book of translations is Poemas de amor y locura / Poems of Love and Madness: Selected Translations (2013). He is the recipient of numerous awards and fellowships, most recently serving as poet-in-residence at Devils Tower National Monument (2013).

— Joseph Green's new full length book is What Water Does at a Time Like This (MoonPath Press, 2015). Among his other books are That Thread Still Connecting Us (MoonPath Press, 2012); Greatest Hits: 1975 -2000 (2001); and The End of Forgiveness (2001). His poems have appeared in The Bellingham Review, Crab Creek Review, Hubbub, Pearl, The Threepenny Review, WillowSprings, and ZYZZYVA, among others. Joseph Green lives in Longview, Washington, where he taught English at Lower Columbia for nearly twenty-five years. Together with his wife, Marquita, he produces limited-edition, letterpress-printed poetry broadsides through The Peasandcues Press.
